

School Rally at Red Top Thursday Night

On Thanksgiving night the patrons of Red Top school met at the school building at the call of the principal of the school to consider the Junior High School System as proposed for Henry county. Practically all belonging to the district were present.

The exercises were opened by a Thanksgiving address by Bryan Lax, a member of the first year high school class. Miss Maggie Lax, a pupil of Grove School, gave a delightful reading.

Mr. Riggs, principal of the school, then outlined the plan of the Junior High School System. He urged the hearty endorsement of the plan by the patrons.

Hon. J. E. J. Lax in a very eloquent address commended the proposed system and introduced the following resolutions which were signed by everyone present.

Whereas: Prof. J. F. Zimmerman, principal of Grove High School, has recognized the inability of Grove School to supply the high school needs of Henry county, and did in an address to the County Court of Henry county at its October term recommend a junior high school system for Henry county, and,

Whereas: Said Court did appoint a committee of five men to consider the proposition, and inasmuch as they will report in favor of establishing thirteen such institutions in Henry county doing two years high school work.

Be It Resolved, By the patrons of Red Top school that we recognize this as a great forward step for the cause of education, of inestimable benefit to the boys and girls of our county in making a high school education possible to all and that we pledge our hearty support to the same and instruct our magistrates, Esqs. J. W. Ligon and J. A. Patterson, to vote for its establishment, and the levying of a tax for its maintenance.

FOR YOUR Christmas Dinner

Oyster Soup. Crisp Crackers.
Celery. Salted Almonds.
Roast Stuffed Turkey, Giblet Gravy.
Cranberry Jelly.
Mashed Potatoes. Turnips.
Onions in Cream.
Lettuce or Romaine Salad.
Plum Pudding or Mince Pie or Ice Cream With Cakes.
Nuts and Raisins. Crackers and Cheese.
Cafe Noir.

The oyster soup should not be too rich. A number of big plump oysters must be used, but care should be taken not to make the first course too heavy, for the ideal dinner is not what one would characterize as a light repast.

A good sized bird should be selected—one between eight and twenty pounds—and care should be exercised that the fowl is not more than a year old. After the turkey is carefully cleaned stuff it with a mixture of stale bread, chestnuts, bay leaves, a dash of cayenne, some fresh (not cooked) celery and a trace of onion. Inasmuch as oyster soup is served as the first course of this dinner it is not deemed expedient to use oyster stuffing for the turkey.

In cooking the bird care should be taken that it does not remain too long in the oven, for this will render the meat dry and tasteless. The natural juices of the fowl are what render its flesh so delicious, and supercooking will dry these up. The turkey should be cooked in a moderately quick oven until the skin is a beautiful rich brown. Frequent basting will do much toward preventing the meat from drying up.

The mashed potatoes, turnips and creamed onions have been chosen with an eye to supplying the other food ingredients necessary to the main course.

For Christmas as well as Thanksgiving.

of the dinner. If any other dishes are substituted they should be of the same general variety.

As a dressing for the lettuce or romaine salad use French cheese or French with the addition of Roquefort. Either of these dressings is comparatively light and will add a touch of variety for the stomach, which ought to be so well filled by this time that it will need coaxing in order thoroughly to enjoy its food.

For dessert make your choice of three dishes, any one of which will dovetail into the scheme of the ideal dinner. Those who pay particular regard to the traditions of Christmas dinners do not think that a meal of this kind is complete without plum pudding. Therefore is this dessert included, although with some misgivings, for it is not what might be called easily digested. The alternative of mince pie—made with home prepared mincemeat and light, flaky pastry—or ice cream with fancy cakes is suggested, the latter being probably the best of all three when viewed from the standpoint of digestibility.

To cover the breaks in the conversation which must follow a meal of this weight serve nuts and raisins and cheese and crackers, with black coffee as the final course.

This dinner is so well balanced—its ingredients are so well selected—that interior disorders are not likely to follow in its train, provided those present do not overeat, a contingency which is extremely probable when one considers the tempting nature of the menu.

Holiday Logic.

When the time comes to prepare the Christmas dinner these notes will prove helpful:

Invitations—time of dinner.

The guests.

How to seat them and how to serve them.

The menu.

The table decorations.

Place cards, toasts, etc.

What plates to use for each course.

What other plates, dishes, etc., for the food.

How the food should be dressed.

What tablecloth, napkins, centerpiece, etc.

Have everything handy.

When to clean silver and get things ready.

The instructions to the maid.

Odds and ends to be done.

Last things to see to and tell husband to do.

The Crowded Inn

There was no room for them in the inn—
St. Luke
"Will ye take a stranger in?
Dark the night is shrouded.
And the wintry blasts begin."
"No; the inn is crowded."
"Will ye take a maiden in,
Comes her hour of sorrow?
Long and late the way hath been!"
"Wait until the morrow."
"Will ye take a baby in
Out of cold and danger—
Mary's child of Kingly kin?"
"Yonder is the manger."
"Will thou take a Saviour in,
Heart of sin and anguish,
With the peace of God to win—
Will thou live or languish?"
—L. O. Williams.
